WABO Certified Welder Information

1. Welder certification cards are the property of WABO and issued to the certified welder to keep in their possession for a period of one (1) year.
2. To renew the certification, the welder shall submit a properly endorsed signature form to WABO and pay a renewal fee.
3. The qualification of the welder or welding operator shall remain in effect unless:
 - a. The welder or welding operator is not engaged in the weld process for which he/she is qualified for a period exceeding six (6) months, in which case a new qualification test shall be required.
 - b. There is some specific reason to question a welder or welding operator's ability, in which case, a new qualification test may be required. In the event the welder or welding operator fails to pass the new qualification test, certification shall be suspended until he/she can successfully complete the welding test.
 - c. The welder fails to renew his/her certification on or before the expiration date. EXCEPTION: An expired certification may be reinstated within sixty (60) days after the expiration date. Thereafter, a new qualification test shall be required.
4. Altered or forged certifications are not accepted and are subject to revocation of the certification for a period of not less than three (3) years from date of infraction.
5. Falsification of this document is subject to revocation of the certification.
6. Carry your card with you on the job at ALL times.
7. Please provide your email address so future notices can be sent electronically.
